About Prayagraj

Prayagraj, formerly known as Allahabad, is a city of immense historical and cultural significance in India, situated at the confluence of the sacred rivers Ganga, Yamuna, and the mythical Saraswati. Known as the "City of Sangam," Prayagraj holds a special place in Hindu mythology and is famed for hosting the Kumbh Mela, the largest religious gathering in the world. The city's legacy is reflected in its grand structures like the Allahabad Fort, a magnificent example of Mughal architecture, and Anand Bhavan, the ancestral home of the Nehru-Gandhi family, which now serves as a museum.

Among the famous landmarks in Prayagraj are Triveni Sangam, where pilgrims come to take a holy dip; Khusro Bagh, a lush garden with stunning Mughal tombs; and Alfred Park (now Chandrashekhar Azad Park), where one can learn about India's freedom struggle. The All Saints Cathedral, a Gothic-style church, and Mankameshwar Temple, nestled along the Yamuna, add to the city's diverse cultural and spiritual attractions. As an educational hub, Prayagraj continues to foster knowledge and tradition, now conveniently accessible through Prayagraj Airport, enhancing connectivity and growth.
